

TUESDAY EVENING, MAY 12, 1857.

The entire debt of the United States, and of all the States of the Union combined, is not equal to one year's interest on the debt of England; our entire debt, State and National, being $220,000,000, or its equivalent, $44,000,000. The National debt of Great Britain is almost, or perhaps quite, twelve hundred millions sterling.

LAND SALES OF THE ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD.—The sales of land by the Illinois Central Railroad Company for the week ending on the 8th inst. were 8,631.84 acres, for the aggregate sum of $113,409.84.

The commissioners appointed by the Legislature of Illinois to select a site for the new penitentiary have agreed upon Joliet as the point.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

English Royalty.—Queen Victoria is the mother of five girls and four boys, all healthy and robust children, and yet she and her husband are less than thirty-eight years old. The immediate royal family of Great Britain consists as follows:

Alexandrina Victoria, born May 24, 1819; married Feb. 10, 1840, to Francis Albert August Charles Emanuel, born August 26, 1819.

CHILDREN.

1. Victoria Adelaide Mary Louise, Princess Royal, born Nov. 21, 1840.

2. Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, born Nov. 9, 1841.

3. Alice Maud Mary, born April 25, 1843.

4. Alfred Ernest Albert, born Aug. 6, 1844.

5. Helena Augusta Victoria, born May 25, 1846.

6. Louisa Carolina Alberta, born March 18, 1848.

7. Arthur William Patrick Albert, born May 1, 1850.

8. Leopold George Duncan Albert, born April 7, 1853.

9. Princess —, born April 14, 1857.

An aggregate meeting of gentlemen interested in promoting an enlarged supply of cotton was held in the town-hall of Manchester on Tuesday last. Mr. J. Cheetham, M. P., presided. The principal resolution adopted was the following:

"That an association be now formed, to be called 'The Cotton Supply Association,' for the purpose of aiding in the removal of governmental and other obstacles to the growth of cotton in the colonies and dependencies of Great Britain, and particularly for developing the resources of British India, where navigation and irrigation require to be established, and for the extended cultivation of cotton in every accessible country capable of producing it; for the supply upon such terms as may be thought judicious, of seeds, cotton cleaning machines, and presses, and generally by affording information—by the diffusion of printed directions for its cultivation—by sending competent teachers of cotton planting and cleaning—by affording prizes for the production of cotton in new fields of culture—and otherwise, as may from time to time be found expedient, to promote the growth and increase the supply of cotton to this country."

Mr. Thomas Bazley, in moving this resolution, said that the manufacturers are now paying not less than £10,000,000 per annum more than should be paid for their cotton if the supply were unfettered; and he assumed that a call of 45 a year (though he did not anticipate that half the amount would be levied) from the owner of a 40 horse power steam engine, for the purposes of the association, would be profitably invested in endeavoring to get rid of an exaction which must now amount in excessive price of the raw material to £5,000 a year to that individual. A committee was appointed for carrying out the object of the association, and a call of 1s. per horse power was ordered to be made on the members.

Photographic Cloud-Making.—We know not what else to call an artificial method of producing clouds, invented by Mr. John Eastham, of this city, says the Manchester Guardian. The clouds are put into the photograph, by means of photographic negatives. We saw yesterday, two views of Castle Howard, with skies thus produced, which had been ordered for her Majesty the Queen, and which are about to be sent to Buckingham Palace. The invention is ingenious; but he who may discover a mode of securing the sun-portraiture of the clouds of nature will do far more for his art.

Among the extraordinary devices now resorted to by some of the fashionable stores in Paris to attract customers, is that of offering to any one who will buy over three dollars' worth of goods the purchaser's photographic likeness gratis.

[From a Paris Letter.]

We received this week some alarming news from Madrid. A good many arrests were made, and evidence of a revolutionary plot were discovered; and it is scarcely probable that it was sufficiently extended to have caused serious trouble against the now well organized repressive forces of the Government.

It is said, but upon what grounds I have been unable to ascertain, that immense efforts are being made in this city for the arrangement of the Mexican and Spanish difficulty. It is certain that the French and English Governments do take an interest in this contest and that the urgency of the whole affair rests, in an European point of view, on the supposed intentions of the American filibusters toward Cuba. This point is so constantly urged, that, if the question is settled without a war, peace may be attributed to the fear inspired by the filibusters.

A discussion is going on here between certain journals on the question of whether the State has the right to put parents under educational restrictions in whatever religion they choose. I only mention the fact to tell you that there are journals in Paris, and in enlightened France, which take the negative of the question.

The Council of State has commenced the examination of the law against the usurpation of titles of nobility and on the organization of an imperial noblesse. These laws will hardly be decided by the present Legislature, and will come up again next year.

General d'Orlandi was authorized to offer France the free concession of a Burmese port, with grounds to the extent of twenty-four miles square. The Emperor has deemed it expedient to refuse this offer. The same offer will be made to the United States. Gen d'Orlandi has enrolled, for the service of the Birman army, fifteen hundred artillery men, whose service had expired in the French army. They receive 200 francs on arriving at Marseilles, 300 francs at Suez, and 2,000 francs on touching the soil of Birman, with promises of great advantages in the country.

NAPLES AFTER THE GREAT BATTLE OF MEANEE.—Nineteen long letters from the Governor General. He has made me Governor of Scinde, with additional pay; and he has ordered the captured guns to be cast into a triumphal column, with our names. I wish he would let me go back to my wife and girls; it would be more to me than pay and glory and honors. Eight months away from them, and my wife's strange dream realized! This is glory! Is it? Yes! Nine princes have surrendered their swords to me on fields of battle, and their kingdoms have been conquered by me and attached to my own country. I have received the government of the conquered province, and all honors are paid to me while living in mine enemy's capital. Well, all the glory that can be desired is mine, and I care so little for it that the moment I can shall be resigned to live quietly with my wife and girls; no honor or riches repay me for absence from them.

Journal of the late Gen. Sir J. C. Napier.

A temple on Bunker Hill is said to be in contemplation by the Bunker Hill Monument Association, to contain the statue of Gen. Warren, which is to be inaugurated with becoming ceremonies on the 17th of June, the anniversary of the battle. The edifice will probably be of white marble, and will be made the receptacle of such relics of the battle as can be obtained. The superintendent of the monument already has in his possession a great variety of those mementoes of the eventful day. We suppose no steps will be taken toward the erection of this temple until after the inauguration of the statue.

OUR MOTHERS.

Multitudinous faces shine upon me, to-day from the tranquil heaven of a lost happiness. Lost, but remembered fondly. All these faces are transfigured with the beauty of love, which is not of earth—but the quintessence of heaven—the atmosphere about God. Some of these faces are solemn and bright, like the stars of the morning, unreal in the eternity of distance. Such were twin-spirits, who went early to drink of the clear waters of life everlasting.

And this one—radiant with the abiding tenderness even the sorrowful could not wash away—so victorious over the "dust and ashes" and the grave-dark, shadowless, but with a summer of steadfast sunshine in the holiest of eyes—this face is of my angel-mother.

Even she stoops toward me, her darling, smiling on me out of the arch-Heavens, and overleaping the jasper walls of the fair city, to talk with me in the melodious language of "the sons of the morning," till the glorification of her golden hair is mingled with the splendor of the stars.

Lost to pain, but sweetly fond of peace; not forgotten, though passed forever from my mortal sight, nor loved the less because so early lost, sleep on smile on! under the grave-clay, and in heaven-rapturable, and incorruptible—never a touch to trouble you, and no sorrow to touch your solemn repose. As a weary bird from distant lands, drinks, folding her wing beside a silent spring in the speck shadow of some fair palm of the tropics; so do I seek her grave afar from the desolate storms of the world. And kneeling humbly, drink inly from the beautiful assurance that the faded form in its straight white shroud under the lilies, is but the solemn shadow flung earthward, of the glorified life above, which God, for Christ's sake, hath made immortal!

Living, to love and suffer, loving to suffer and die, is the generous aim of woman. For her, there is no mightier reach of intellect than that her winged thoughts, and aspirations of love achieve, stretching on through living, beyond death, till lost in the bosom of the infinite. (And what more may man achieve?) For her, there is no sublimer battle-field than the arena of men's hearts. And therein, her limitless powers of loving—like a steadfast Angel, strong to buffet the evil with the good—war nobly with man's unsanctified passions, and win a silent victory.

Curl not your bearded lips in scorn of her gentle teaching, oh! ye dark, strong men—ye demi-gods of labor. Ye, with sinews and muscles mighty to dig and delve; to toil at the fiery forge, or curb the wrathful lion of the seas with the proud right arm of science; and ye who drive the shining ploughshare of philosophy through fields of future harvest—all your foreheads, be they grim with sweat and dust, or royal with immortal bays, are holy with the kiss of motherhood!

With the deep spiritual eyes that shall one day see God, look inly! The kiss your mother left upon your cheek and baby-brow, when first you saw light, and drew in with the first breath of being that divine essence imperishable as eternity—the tender blessing whispered on earth, but audible in Heaven, given with uplifted heart and hands, crown you still; ay, as the stars of the summer make glorious the forehead of the great night.

Battle nobly with the enslaving world—wield a stout sword with a fearless arm for truth's and freedom's sake; but keep your mother's blessing and her kiss (the lips that gave them, are under this snow, perhaps,) as sacredly as the Arch-Angel keeps the great seal of the universe.

EMMA ALICE BROWNE.

[Correspondence of the New York Tribune.]

Boston, May 6, 1857.

The Spiritualist controversy here is going on with unabated vigor. Fresh fuel was added to the excitement on the subject by the appearance last week among us of Dr. Hume, the celebrated medium, whose performances at Paris, before the Emperor Napoleon have been so much noticed in the newspapers. He arrived in the country a fortnight ago, having come to Boston to get his sister, with whom he embarked for Europe in to-day's steamer. He returns to Paris at the Emperor's request, he says. All the statements in the papers about his doings at the Tuilleries he pronounces fabrications, based on conjecture. His experiments before the Imperial Court were performed in private, and the persons present pledged to secrecy. He himself declines to give any particulars of what occurred.

Mr. Hume is a Scotchman and came to this country while a very young boy. He is twenty-two years of age but looks nearly thirty. He is of middle size, sandy haired, with a bright, shrewd, energetic face, pleasant expression, and very nervous, restless temperament. He is communicative (except about the doings at the Tuilleries) and talks incessantly. His manners are good, though obviously not those of an educated man.

On Monday evening last a Spiritualist session was held at a private house up town, with Hume and Willis, the Cambridge student, for mediums. Some of the editors of the Traveler and Journal, and other gentlemen of the press, were present by invitation. The whole company numbered fourteen. The room in which the party assembled was lighted by gas, and every opportunity was afforded for investigation. The usual feats of moving tables and pianos were performed in the most successful manner, in full gaslight, with a sharp-eyed, skeptical gentleman under the table, and half-a-dozen others closely watching the mediums, whose feet were also held. The table moved was a heavy extension table, about ten feet long, and on it, part of the time, was the added weight of an editor, whose plump condition does credit to the prosperity of the profession in Boston. One of the leaves of the table was taken out by unseen agency and laid upon the others. A cloth being placed upon the table, a hand, or what to the touch seemed a hand, was repeatedly thrust up under it. This was grasped by some of the gentlemen present, in whose grasp it melted away. They state that the form and feel of human fingers was perfectly palpable. The hands of the mediums and of all present were at that time on the table in full sight.

Mr. Hume held an accordion in one hand, taking hold of the bottom of the instrument, while his other hand was stretched out away from it. Several tunes were played upon it by invisible agency. One of the editors present inspected it closely and the bellows part and the keys moving exactly as if some person were playing upon it, while it hung suspended in the air at only a few inches from his eyes. The result, in short, of the session was that everybody present was satisfied that the feats performed were not done by the mediums, and that any theory of solution, which ascribes them to jugglery, is simply ridiculous.

I have not gone into the minute details of this session, because it was an impromptu affair, got up on the occasion of the visit of Hume. A regular and formal session is to be held soon, with Willis for a medium, and some well-known and scientific gentlemen of Boston and Cambridge for spectators of which, doubtless, an authenticated record will be made, and of which I will send you a report.

BIOGRAPHY AND PORTRAITS OF LEARNED MEN.—It is proposed to publish at Vienna a folio containing large sized engravings of the most distinguished men in the various departments of natural science, accompanied with letter-press biographical sketches of each.

A Scientific Board has been appointed to select the most prominent men worthy of this tribute to the number of one hundred, without regard to nationality. The name of Humboldt, as would naturally be expected, stands at the head of the list. From the United States there have been selected as follows: Lieut. Maury, of the Washington Observatory, the philosopher of winds and tides; Professor J. O. Dana, of Yale College, author of "A System of Mineralogy" and also of several reports of the Wilkes Exploring Expedition; and Professor L. Agassiz, of Cambridge, whose name and works are familiar to all.

We learn that these gentlemen have already been requested to furnish their portraits for the use of the Austrian Commission.

The work is intended to be got up in the highest style of art, and will be, undoubtedly, a splendid addition to the literature of the day, a handsome compliment to men of science, and an honor to Austrian enterprise.—N. Y. Jour. of Com.

A FUNNY MISTAKE.—A Quaker at a "Nigger" Show. At Buffalo, on Tuesday evening, Henry Wilson, U. S. Senator from Massachusetts, was announced to lecture at American Hall (by mistake) instead of Kremlin Hall, before the anti-slavery people. Negro Minstrels were performing at American Hall, and their popularity and that of Mr. Wilson combined to pack the house. The Republic says the mistake was not discovered until the "opening chorus," when many prominent lecture-goers found in the place of an elaborate lecture on "Labor," that they were voluntarily attending a "negro performance." Their misfortune did not end here, for the hall was so crowded it was impossible to recede.

One old Quaker, who with his broad brim sauntered slowly in and took a prominent seat, appeared to be terribly scandalized when he first discovered the awful mistake he had made, but he had no time to repent of it, for, before he could make an effort to depart, the broad brim was quivering, and his sides shaking like an agitated plate of jelly at the witticisms and burlesques he was witnessing.

WHITE TEETH, PERFUMED BREATH, AND BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXIONS—can be acquired by using the "Balm of a Thousand Flowers." What lady or gentleman would remain under the curse of a disagreeable breath, when the using "BALM OF A THOUSAND FLOWERS," as a dentifrice, would not only render it sweet, but leave the teeth white as alabaster? Many persons do not know their breath is bad, and the subject is so delicate their friends will never mention it. Beware of counterfeits. Be sure each bottle is signed FETTRIDGE & CO., N. Y.

BEWARE OF IMPOSITION!

We have in our possession glasses for sale which we have exchanged others that were sold by an optician gentleman now in this city for fine Pebbles of a corroboration price. We can satisfy any one that they are but very soft glass, and we refer to the Jewellers of this city for the quality of his glasses. The extreme hardness of the genuine Pebble—that they cannot be cut with the diamond, and that they are impervious to scratches and thus becoming dim by constant use. Their perfect transparency and highly refractive properties commend them at once preeminently superior to any others lens for the eye.

The experience of the senior of our firm as a physician, and the success which has attended our exertions for several years, past in this department of our business, by obtaining fine glasses adapted to all conditions of impaired vision, induce us to take this occasion to say, with assurance of public confidence, that whatever we represent as Periscopic, Periscopic, Convex, Concave, Cataract, &c., of the Pebble or fine English glass, in gold, silver, or steel, shall be as represented; and in all cases where perfect satisfaction is not given the article to be exchanged or pay refunded.
